Chicago, July 2, 1902.

Daffy Mair Whiskey Co., Gentlemen; I have completed a careful and most exhaustive chemical analysis of Duffy's Puv-Malt Whiskey which showed it to be pure whisky uncontaminated with foreign matter. The search for fixed oil demon-strated the remarkable purity of this whiskey, as notwithstanding the most dell cate tests known were employed in this in-vestigation, the mere traces of this poisonous matter found were such as to be in capable of determination. This unusual re-sult speaks more eloquently than words, the care taken in its production, while it is an unfailing indication of "age" of the whiskey, which is so essential to an article to be used for medicinal purposes.

The various tests made were the most rigid and exhaustive of any similar exam-inations ever made in this laboratory, and the results obtained were of the most flat-tering character, indicating that the Duffy Mait Whiskey Company's product is an at-ticle of exceptional merit, and well deserves its name of "Medicinal Whiskey" Yours very truly, J. Dunraven Young.

POSSE AFTER "JACK THE HUGGER" WITH SHOTGUNS.

He Frightened Two Young Ladies and a Party of Their Friends Set

New York, March 7.—Armed with shotguns, revolvers and clubs, a posse of resident of West New Brighton, Staten Island, scoured the woods on the outskirts of the town in search of a man who is supposed to be one of two Peeping Toms that have created a reign of terror there. These Peeping Toms are also Jack the Huggers.

The man sprang from behind a clump of bushes shortly after 8 o'clock while the Misses Cunningham, aged 16 and 18, were passing through Castleton avenue, on their way to their home at Davis and Dement avenues.

Throwing his arms around the younger of the two girls, the man tried to detain her. She fought with him desperately, while her sister ran shricking for assistsance. In a few minutes the older girl returned with her fasher and several sesidents of the place. By that time the girl who had been attacked had wrested herself free, and her, assailant was just disappearing into the woods when the rescuers ran up.

A search party was at once organized, REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

A search party was at once organized, and at a late hour they were still in the woods, swearing to wreak vengeance on the miscreant if he should be found,

It is believed that this man and his mate are not only guilty of peeping, but that they are responsible for the series of highway robberles that have been committed in this neighborhood during the past three months.

So terrified have the woman three-this neighborhood during the past three months.

So terrified have the women thereabouts, which is the fashionable section of the town, become that many of them are now carrying revolvers for use should they be attacked on the streets. The same women are also keeping revolvers on their dressing tables at night, and more than one plucky girl has declared that she will shoot the next time she detects a man peering in at her window.

The police have been appealed to to stop the outrages, but up to the present they thave not succeeded in catching sither of the guilty men. For greater protection several wealthy residents of West New Brighton have had themselves sworn in as encelal deputies, with full power of arrest, and if any of these deputies encounter the two men rough handling will follow before they are taken to the police station.

A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.

The Way Physicians Now Treat Catarrh.

Physicians who formerly depended upon inhalers, sprays and local washes or ointments now use Sunart's Catarrh Tablets, because, as one of the most prominent stated, these tablets contain in pleasant, convenient form all of the really efficient and reliable catarrh remedies, such as red gum, blood root and Hydrastin.

They contain no cocaine or opiate (so common in liquid catarrh medicines and cough syrups) and they are given to little children with entire safety and benefit.

Doctor J. J. Reitinger says: I suffered from Catarrh in my head and throat every winter and it would hang on clear into summer, with stoppage of the nose and irritation in the throat affecting my voice so that I was continually clearing my throat before I could speak pianly; it finally extended to the stomach, causing catarrh of the stomach.

I bought a 50-cent box of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at my druggist's, carried them in my pocket and used them regularly several times a day, and the way in which they cleared my head and throat and improved my hearing and general health I consider little short of remarkable. I had no catarrh last winter and spring, and now I am entirely free from any catarrhal trouble whatavet.

Mirs. Jerome Ellison of Wheeling writes: I

Mrs. Jerome Ellison of Wheeling writes: I suffered from catarrh nearly my whole life and last winter my two children also suffered from catarrhal colds and sore throat so much they were out of school a large part of the winter. My brother, who was cured of catarrhal deafness by using Stuart's Calarrh Tablets, urged me so much to try them that I sent to the drug store, and, bought a package, and I am truly thankful for what they have done for me med my children. I always keep a box of the tablets in the house and at the first appearance of a cold or sore throat one or two of the catarrh tablets nips it in the bud and Catarrh is no longer a household affliction with us.

A WILD ELK

Beast's Antlers Become Entangled in Brush, but Rider Escapes and Wants to Be Game Warden.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Denver, March 7.—Miss Emma Kellogg of Route County is an applicant for the position of Game Warden for the Rout and Rio Blaces counties district.

Her arrival here created a sensation in the Capitol corridors. Many of the Jegislaors were curious to meet her, and Fish commissioner Thomas Holland, who acompanied her, found his companion always center of interest. A woman as Game Warden will be a novelty. Mr. Holland knew nothing about Miss Kellozg until she went to the office hunting for the new Game Watden, Mr. Woodward.

for the new Game Watden, Mr. Woodward The young lady was very ready to state her qualifications for the place, and from the facts she gave of her experience with game it is evident that few men in Routt and Rio Blanco are better acquainted with the varieties of that section.

CLIMBED A SAPLING.

Miss Kellogg's most thrilling adventure was a wild ride on the back of an elk. While out in the hills one day she came suddenly on an angry buil eik. She had leaned her gun against a tree, and before she could get it the elk was upon her. She took refuge in a supling and tried to hold the animal's antiers around it, but her strength was not sufficient and the elk broke away. Miss Kellogg took advantage of a moment's respite to climb a tree and sat on the first limb. This angered the elk more than ever and he gave the tree such a bump that Miss Kellogg feil off.

She would have been stamped to death by the animal's sharp hoof had it not been that luckily she fell on the elk's back. Then, with great presence of mind, she grasped the antiers and held on for dear life.

The elk was not expecting a development of this kind, and it tore off through the woods, terror-stricken, endeavoring to shake off its burden. Miss Kellogg, however, did not propose to be shaken, and she only cling the tighter.

Away they went, the crazed animal dashing through the trees with the velocity of an express train. Up hills and across valleys the animals sped, jumping over the rocks with tremendous leaps that almost unsated the frightened rider.

Miss Kellogg was becoming weak from the terrible strain, and felt that she must soon release her hold, when an unexpected incident proved her deliverance. The elk had made violent efforts to dislodge the girl, and it was one of the animal's tricks to accomplish this which saved Miss Kellogg's life.

The elk darted through some thick brish where overhanging branches came low down, in order to brush the rider off. But the terrified animal miscalculated about its antiers and got caught in the branches. It struggled and struggled, but could not get loose, and it was but the work of a moment for the intrepld mountain girl to kill the captive animal by cutting its throat with her hunting knife.

NERVOUS REACTION.

NERVOUS REACTION.

After her ride of several miles was over and the danger was all past, the lucky girl came near collapsing from nervous reaction. She could hardly make her way home, but she got help and returned to claim the animal. Its branching antiers now ornament her home.

This exciting adventure occurred several years ago, but Miss Kellogg has lost none of her nerve.

She says she would have entered the broncho-busting contest last fall had not her parents dissuaded her on the ground that she would be the only lady entered. She lassoced a young bear once and took it home alive, by giving her pony rein whenever it tried to attack her.

Miss Kellogg believes she can perform the duties of the office and she intends to get Senator Jefferson and Representative Lyttle to champion her cause with Game Wardenelect Woodward. NERVOUS REACTION.

FELL DEAD AT THE GRAVE OF HIS FRIEND.

Joseph Chapper, Acting as Pailbearer at Funeral of Mangels Kuliken, Succumbed to Disease.

Berkeley Lodge, No. 27, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, died suddenly of heart disease just as he reached the grave of his friend in Mountain View Cemetery. Only an hour before, while the services were being conducted at the home of his old associate. Chappee had said, as he took a last look at the body of his friend: "I want to die in harness." That his wish was answered in so short a time came as a great shock to his brother pallbearers. He died as he staggered under the weight of the heavy casket, and came near rolling into the newly opened grave.

When Chappee's body had been carried aside, Kullken was buried with all the rites of the order, and then in the hearse that had conveyed Kullken's body to the cemetery that of Chappee was placed, and the funeral procession made its way back to Berkeley.

For many years Kullken and Chappee had been the closest of friends, and when the former passed away suddenly it was a sad blow to the old man who had been his companion in many of their latter-day ventures.

They were both charter members of the Berkeley Lodge of Odd Fellows. Chappee at one time was a Town Trustee and was the first Town Marshal of Oskland. Of late years he had devoted all his time to the order of which he was an honored member. He leaves a widow and a son residing in Sacramento.

The other pallbearers who acted with Chappee at the funeral of his friend were
F. W. Ryas, J. G. Wright, John Wolley.
Thomas Hahn and Phil Sheridan, all oid friends of both men.

New York, March 7.—Wounded Buffalo, a Mohawk Indian, whose Carlisle School name is Lewis Simpson, caused excitement at Broadway and Franklin street by his summary punishment of a tormentor.

Simpson was walking down Broadway, his long black hair fluttering in the breeze. He had come from Coney Island, where he breaks broncos and gives exhibition sparring bouts, for he is an athlete and expert football player. Two plumbers, Louis Rampel and Frank Marvin, both residents of Harlem, were close behind him. They have been working in Franklin street and had been partaking of their luncheons, which, it developed later, consisted more of ilquid than of solid refreshments. At any rate, their spirits were high, and the Indian's fluttering hair axcited their mirthful attention. Walk as he would, Simpson found the plumbers were at his heels, bumping and jostling him.

"Give him the foot," he heard one of his annoyers whisper.

Whoever said it, it was Rumpel, who carried out the idea. For a minute Simpson almost lost his balance. Rumpel, who was not overfirm of foot, also staggered. His momentary lack of equipoise caused him to throw up one arm.

The Indian saw the opening and took advantage of it. His fist struck the plumber and the plumber struck the sidewaik. The Indian then walked straight shead. BUNKO GAME COSTS HOTEL MAN $1,000.

San Francisco, Cal., March 7.—Henry Cammas, proprietor of the Oriental House, has reported to the police an experience with ourke men in which he lost $1.50. Two clever operators took $500 in sold and $500 in banknotes from him, and he didn't know he was robbed.

Instead, the man thought he had in his keeping $12,000 belonging to one of the men who had taken his coin.
The game was cleverly played and Cammas fell an easy victim. According to his statement to Chief of Police Hodgkins, an unknown Frenchman rented a room at the Oriental House. Hardly a word passed between landlord and tenant until the stranger told Cammas that he had come to Oukland to establish a restaurant and asked the lodging-house keeper to help him lock for a location.

The two men started out and finally stopped in a saloon. While they were at the bar, both speaking French, a third person entered. He addressed them in the same language, and, stating that he was glad to meet two of his countrymen, suggested that they go into a tear room to drink.

The newcomer told his friends that he had just inherited $150.000, and in support of his statement drew a roll of paper from beneath his shirt and took from it a number of banknotes. Cammas told him he should not carry such a sum of money with him and suggested that he deposit it in a bank. When the man refused, claiming he was afraid of banks, Cammas told him to put it in a safe-deposit box.

Aft was then agreed that the unknown Prenchman should place his $150.000 in a box and that Cammas should plut in $1.600. The former was to keep the key to the box, while the latter was to keep the hox containing the money.

The men then parted. The two strangers took the key and stated, they would go to dinner. Cammas went home with the box. All were to meet the next morning at the Oriental House and deposit the box in some bank.

Cammas waited until night, and then had the box broken open. In it he found poker chips instead of coin, and a roll of paper in place of the supposed fortune in banknotes.

Saby Scott Enjoys Distinction of Reing First "L" Infant Born in Greater New York. REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, March 7.—Passengers on a Sixth avenue "L" train were startled to see a strange bird hovering over the rear car shortly after midnight. It followed persistently, try as they would to leave it behind. With a victorious cry it finally settled down on the station at One Hundred and Fourth street. The clang of an ambulance-bell was intermingled with the bird's strange note, and an interested little group stood about on the platform until Doctor Finn of the J. Hood Wright Hospital came out and made the announcement:

Baby Scott, the plump little son of Mrs. Madeline Scott of No. 217 West One Hundred and Thirty-forsth street, who is now quite happy by his mother's side in the hospital, will enjoy the rather unique distinction of being the first. "L" baby born in Greater New York, probably in the world. Mr. and Mrs. Scott were visiting friends cowntown and started home after midnight, Mrs. Scott became fill on the car, and luckly there were several mothers there who knew what to do. The men retreated to another car and Mrs. Scott was carried into the waiting-room when the One Hundred and Fourth street station was reached. An ambulance was Called and the little stranger came soon after Doctor Finn reached the station. The mother and son were placed in the ambulance and taken to the hospital and from present appearance both will be able to go home soon.

of Japan and he himself is an ardent church man.

The immediate reason for his assailing "the Hub" is the tumult raised in Boston over the fact that the other day Edward Everett Hale partook of communion at the memorial service in the Holy Trinity Church, of which Phillips Brooks was so long rector. Talk, shallowness and shams, in Mr. Partridge's opinion, are the leading characteristics of the Boston of to-day in art, literature and religion.

His indignation at the religious phase of the circumstances easily passed to art, "for," said he, "art and religion have always been allied. You cannot separate them and they never have been separated. It is only a decadent attempt that has ever been made to draw them apart.

"I have nothing sgainst Boston personality," he added, "but everything against that order of living and talk which paralyzes every effort to uplift and ennoble life and develop a great national art that is worthy the American people. A man may make a reputation in Boston and yet be utterly unknown to the cosmopolitan world, but in New York let a man do something and it is the same for him as if he were in Paris, Lomdon or Berlin. The city that has expelled her artists as Boston has is in the same position as was Florence when she drove Dante from her gates, only to ask back his hones from Ravena and be refused.

ISLAND TREASURE HUNTER DID NOT FIND GOLD.

Donzel Stoney Returned to San Fran-Seas to Resume Practice of Law.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. San Francisco, Cal., March 7.—Donzel Stoney, the young attorney who went away last July to hunt for treasure in the South Seas, is home again as brown as a berry last July to hunt for treasure in the South Seas, is home again as brown as a berry ought to be and as slent as a clem. He will not say a word about his trip. His friends tell of him cruising six or seven days in an open boat among the small islands of the Marshall group, and his arrival in Australia so sunburned that a lady fellow-passenger on the home-bound Sierra declared his complexion was like a Maori's. Though he will say nothing for publication, there can be no doubt that there is no story to tell of treasure trove.

"I know what I know!" says Mr. Stoney when asked to tell of his trip with Captain Brown in quest of Kidd's treasure. But naught else will he say. He will not even deny that he went with Captain Brown in search of the mythical isle. But his friends declare and avow that he did.

Hunting for the treasure cached by the more or less mythical Captain Kidd and men of his lik seems to be as bootless as the search for the North Pole and almost as expensive. Last July a little company was formed by a few young men of this city and Boston for the purpose of an expedition to some unnamed South Sea island, suposed to be in the Marshall group, there to uncarth a fabulous sum of money, in all kinds of foreign coin, that had once been buried by the infamous captain and uncovered and reburled by Captain James Brown, a more or less ancient mariner of modern times.

recent adventure. Of the disappointed treasure hunter none seems to care to tell the tale.

Among those financially interested in the venture were George Sutton, a Boston capitalist; a Mr. Sherritt, Attorney Donzel Stoney, Ogden Hoffman and former Judge William R. Daingerfield. Mr. Stoney has nothing to say of the expedition. He does not say that he does not know all about it, but he does say that he will not tell.

It was about the middle of July last that the schooner Herman "cleared" at the Custom-house without designating her destination, and at once every union sailor on the wharf knew that the Herman was off on a treasure hunting expedition. As to the first port of cail and the second there was no doubt; she was to go straight to Honolulu, then to Tahilt; but after that her course was to be shaped sou sou' by sou' east to the Marshail group perhaps, or perhaps somewhere else.

When the vessel had dipped below the horizon the story was told that Captain James Brown of Boston, who had braved the seas, man and boy, these many years, had somehow tumbled across the cache, or one of the many caches of the famous New England Captain Kidd. There was no chart forthcoming with cabalistic signs, a lonely tree and many paces carefully marked off on it to show just where the booty lay, but Captain Brown is credited with having told the story of his long life, including his many warderings among the South Sea lands, and when some of the get-rich-quick gentlemen went to Boston with the possessor of the valuable secret they had no difficulty in confirming every part of the record except that which most needed corroboration.

It cost about $18,000 to purchase the schooner and fit her for the trip. With what sardonic humor the venturesome, sexagenarian Captain watched these preparations and "bossed the job" some of the members may now perhaps recall.

Silent Mr. Stoney will not discuss his many days spent in an open boat looking anxiously for the isle on which Captain Jim Brown had rehidden that treasure. He got to Australia somehow, and even now his complexion has not, by far, returned to lits normal whiteness. A goodly portion of the human outfit got to Australia and there they took leave of Captain Brown. The story of the parting has not yet been told.

"The matter is a personal one with me, and I must firmly decline to discuss it in any form whatsoever." He would not even say whether he went to Cocoa Island.

The Herman will probably settle down to carrying freight and making money.

FOUND A SHROUD IN THE SHIFTING SAND.

William Reinhart, San Francisco senger Boy, Believed to Have Been Stricken With Heart Disease.

San Francisco, March 7.-William Reinhart, aged 13 years, who had been working hard as a messenger boy for the City of Paris in order to support his mother, was found dead in a vacant lot at Sixth ave-nue and California street, his body buried beneath the shifting sand.

His was an agoulding death in that deso-late spot, and the indications are that he dug for himself a tomb and covered his frail body with sand during a frenzy of pain. He lay there, face downward, and smothered to death, and the cries that had rent the air a six hours previous were stified in the sand in which he lay.

This boy had been true to his trust. In the morning he had been sent out to deliver a package to Mrs. "M. Stolz, at No. 229 Eighth avenue, and reached that place between 11:20 and 12 o'clock. He rushed breathless up the stairs, rang the door bell and handed the package to Mrs. Cahill, a demestic. His face was flushed and perspiration was on his brow.

"Any charge," inquired Mrs. Cahill, He shook his head and then went running away. He was next seen two blocks distant, in the vacant lot where his dead body lay a few hours later. When seen he was setting in an upright position, but did not appear to be distressed. That was about 12 o'clock.

Persons residing in the vicinity paid no heed to the boy as he remained there alone; none knew him and there were no children in the vicinity who might have been attracted to the place where they usually play in the sand.

Shortly after I o'clock Mrs. T. C. Pediar heard terrible cries from the lot. She went to the back window and saw a boy running around in the sand and she thought he was at play and did not consider the matter further, although the cries continued for some time.

Then between 3.30 and 4 o'clock Miss A. Guthrie was passing near the lot. She saw two feet protruding from a sand heap. A hand, white and lifeless was uplifted. Terror-stricken, the young lady ran to her home a block away and told her brother. Archie Guthrie, and Thomas Allen. In company with John Greeley, a contractor, the young men went to the place indicated. They pulled out the body from the heap of sand, but life was extinct.
